Hugh Taylor Birch State Park

If you are looking for a more laid-back wedding location with a natural rustic feeling, then Hugh Taylor Birch State Park may be the setting for you. Located across the street from Fort Lauderdale beach, this picturesque park is a tropical paradise. The park's showpiece is the banyan tree that Mr. Birch planted over 120 years ago! The tree creates a natural canopy of shade and provides a stunning backdrop for any wedding. Birch State Park is a location for couples looking for more of a "fun in the sun" wedding. Surrounded by water, two large open fields, a sand volleyball court, a playground, parking and three pavilions this is the ideal location for large parties or can be made intimate for close family weddings. Under the tree, your ceremony can hold up to 250 guests.

No need to go far after the ceremony, their team will set up your reception in one of the two open areas around the tree to continue your outdoor experience. With lights crisscrossing overhead you and your guests will feel as though they left the city and are dancing under the stars. The park is a fully turnkey wedding destination that can provide anything you need from catering, decorations, tables, dance floor and to lighting, DJs and event director.

Historic Maxwell Room

The Maxwell Room is billed as a "hidden gem," but it is several gems and more than a room. There are several settings the Maxwell Room provides both outside and within its beautiful Mediterranean revival style architecture. First, the outdoor seawall on the south side of the New River creates a beautifully unique backdrop for a ceremony that adds class and sophistication. The courtyard area is lined with bistro lights, located in front of the Maxwell Room entrance, with the fanciful garden-like setting. Finally is there is the Roaring 1920's Den with brick arches and colonnades, a reminder that while the world has changed and grown a fast-paced race, some things retain the charm and elegance of bygone days. The Maxwell Room is also a complete wedding destination, with a varied of packages to cover all your needs from venue from to menu.
